

Ten Questions Used in Determining Teachableness

1. Do I normally think my ideas concerning issues are the best?
2. Am I doing anything positive about improving the accuracy of my self-image? Do I actively seek objective feedback or evaluation by people I look up to spiritually?
3. Do I seek counsel (and honestly evaluate it) before making significant decisions?
4. Is my bible study application-oriented or information-oriented?
5. Do I have a questioning mind? Do I seek to learn better ways of doing things?
6. Has God spoken to me recently about an area of my life which has been significantly changed by this conviction?
7. Has any friend recently made a personal observation about my life which resulted in a corrective change? Did I express to him my appreciation for this observation?
8. Am I a good listener or do I normally spend the "listening" time thinking of what I'm going to say next?
9. Am I defensive when someone makes a suggestion concerning my life? Do I seek to justify myself?
10. Do I look to anyone (who is in a realistic position to evaluate my walk with God) for spiritual guidance and counsel?
